Chapter 1 by Captain

The aliens walked towards me their big, beady, black eyes stared at me with a blank look, they were coming

Chapter 2 by SaintSayaka

I fought against my bindings with little luck. Their crooked voices attempted the human tongue, perhaps as a comfort, but their distorted pronunciation of my name did little.

"Lucin, Lucin," they chanted.

I did not want to know what was in store for me. The drills on the table next to me were not only stereotypical, but terrifying.

Chapter 3 by Noel

The lead alien struggled, but eventually he was able to complete a sentence.

"Wih- wih you sow us how tooh use thiss? Phlease?" Their pronunciation was horrifying but I understood them

Chapter 4 by Noel

I slowly, carefully reached down and picked up the drill. I pulled the trigger, but nothing happened.

"There's no battery." I said. "It needs a battery to work."

"Baht... are... eeh...?" The lead alien questioned.

"Yeah, a battery. You know, it holds electricity. zapp-zapp?"

The aliens muttered among themselves for a moment before two of them left in search of a battery. Two armored aliens strapped me back into the bindings and then the rest of the group stood back and waited.

Two hours later the two came back carrying a ceiling fan. The poor little guys just didn't get it.

Chapter 5 by Noel

A few hours later, when the aliens had finally found the correct drill battery, I hooked it up and began to demonstrate. At first, they jumped back, scared, but they soon began to inch forward, a look of awe on their faces.

"Lucin, give et tooh uss phlease." They chanted.

I stopped the drill and set it on the ground. The lead alien pattered up and took it gingerly. The two armored aliens strapped me back into my bindings and stepped away. The small group of little green men filed out of the small door and left me in darkness.

I laid there in my bindings for an unbearably long time. I was hungry and alone, but and the aliens never came.

Chapter 6 by bruh26

It was just me, in the dark room, alone by myself. I didn't know what to do. But what I did know was that those aliens left me to die. I started to shake. Faster and faster and then the aliens appeared. They were taking off into space. Over my nervous system, which let me know all the smarts they knew

Chapter 7 by ArchAngel

I was disappointed they knew so little about science and technology. I shouldn't have been surprised, they hadn't understood the concepts of drills and batteries. Their technology, their ship and the communicators were relics from an advanced civilisation, they didn't have the ability to build anything like that.

They were explorers, and the micro chip they inserted opened up vistas of whole new solar systems to me, their strange cultures and customs. I discovered they had been scared of my size and strength to begin with, humans towered over them like giants, and so they felt they needed to restrain me. They had overcome their fear now and I was free to walk among them.

After a month, we arrived at their destination. A blue orb of a planet in a binary star system. As the ship touched down in a city of glistening silver spires, I was finally going to discover why they had abducted me.

Chapter 8 by ArchAngel

"Phlease wih you helup us? You iss only hope with Ik-hee-ah."

Several of them dragged a cardboard box into the chamber. I pulled it open carefully and looked inside, "You've got to be kidding me!"

It turned out they weren't kidding me. It was a self assembly chest of drawers.
